

While we have all heard of the apostrophe, sometimes we are not sure when (or where, for that matter) to use this pesky little punctuation mark in our writing. But never fear: some helpful tips are here!

When and Where Should I Use an Apostrophe?

- 1) Use an apostrophe to show possession. Does someone or something own a noun (person/place/thing) in your sentence? If you answered yes, use an apostrophe!

❖ Singular Possessive

Example: Bob's burgers are both creative and delicious.

Explanation: The burgers belong to Bob, who is singular in that he is only one person, so we add an apostrophe and –s to Bob's name. (Bob is the owner of his name, and so forth.)

❖ Plural Possessive of Words Ending in –s

Example: The Belchers' apartment is above their restaurant.

Explanation: Remember Bob from our example above? His last name is "Belcher." Now, since we are talking about the apartment owned by his family (more than one person), the Belchers, we need to make a plural possessive. Since "Belchers" already ends in –s, we place the apostrophe at the end of the word, after the –s.

❖ Plural Possessive of Words NOT Ending in –s

Example: The children's names are Tina, Gene, and Louise.

Explanation: Children is the plural form of the singular "child," but it does not end in –s, so we have to add an apostrophe and –s to "children" when we want to show that they own something (in this case, their names).

❖ Possessive of Compound Words

Example: Bob's mother-in-law's visit with the family was a complete disaster.

Explanation: Since mother-in-law is a compound word (one larger word/meaning made up of smaller words), we only need to add an apostrophe and –s to the last word/part of the compound word.

- 2) Use an apostrophe to make contractions. Are you combining two words and leaving out a letter or letters? If so, replace the missing letter(s) with an apostrophe!

it is	Bob's Burgers is one of my favorite shows because it's so funny.
they are	The Belcher children are amusing because they're always making mischief.
you are	You're not going to believe who does the voice acting for Linda's character.
who is	Who's your favorite TV family?
cannot	Bob's restaurant often can't compete with Jimmy Pesto's Pizzeria.
does not	Louise doesn't mind dragging her brother and sister into her schemes.
were not	Bob and Linda weren't a perfect couple; they were a realistic couple.

Misuses of the Apostrophe

Okay, now that we know when and where we should use an apostrophe, let's talk about apostrophe mistakes to avoid.

When and Where Should I NOT Use an Apostrophe?

- 1) Do NOT place the apostrophe before the –s in plural words ending in –s.

Don't	When Gene and a classmate almost start a playground fight, the boy's fathers get involved.
Do	When Gene and a classmate almost start a playground fight, the boys' fathers get involved.

Since we are talking about each boy's father, we have to pluralize boy first by adding an –s; then, we add the apostrophe to the word.

- 2) Do NOT use an apostrophe to form plural nouns.

Don't	Bob likes to give his burger's creative and often outrageous name's.
Do	Bob likes to give his burgers creative and often outrageous names.

When we need to pluralize a noun (make it more than one person/place/thing), we simply add –s (unless we are dealing with a noun whose plural form has a changed letter or ending instead of –s). Either way, though, we never use an apostrophe to make a noun plural.

- 3) Do NOT use an apostrophe with verbs ending in –s.

Don't	Bob cook's an unusually delicious burger for his landlord. Unfortunately, Mr. Fiscoeder choke's on his food.
Do	Bob cooks an unusually delicious burger for his landlord. Unfortunately, Mr. Fiscoeder chokes on his food.

When a verb ends in –s, we do not need to add a punctuation mark to the word.

- 4) Do NOT use an apostrophe to form possessives of personal pronouns.

Don't	Bob's Burgers is becoming a popular show because of it's unique sense of humor and family dynamic.
Do	Bob's Burgers is becoming a popular show because of its unique sense of humor and family dynamic.

Possessives of Personal Pronouns: his, hers, its, ours, yours, theirs, whose

Note: Use an apostrophe with the word “its” only to indicate the contraction of “it is.”
